A traveller with 5 members of his family from Dharwar to North Arcot. The whole family were detained here for disinfection on the 10th instant. On account of their evasive replies and the fact that it was ascertained that there had been recently some deaths in their family from Plague. It was decided to detain them here for the full ten days, although they had already been under observation for 10 days at Dharwar. On examination this morning the patient was found to be suffering from fever and complained of pain in the head and body generally; there was bilious vomiting and slight restlessness. He was removed to the Plague Camp on Suspicion and on examination noon an enlarged gland was felt in the Right axilla. The fever had increased to 105°, with a dry tongue, suffused eyes and feeling of great prostration and thirst, little or no delerium bowels Costive. There was now but little doubt of the nature of the disease as the enlarged gland had become more enlarged and tender with Symptoms of prostration out of proportion to the length and height of the of the febrile Condition. Antiseptic and Stimulating treatment was adopted at once with liquid and nourishing diet. The other five members of the family have been segregated in the Plague Camp in the Sheds erected for the relations of Plague patients. A Hospital Assistant has been told off for Special duty in Connection with the Case and a Sufficient police guard appointed to watch the Camp.
