The P.C. view seems Correct. These efforts at perfection make a scheme unpopular.

Proceedings of the Plague Commission.
No 96., dated 7th October 1898.

Read — the following Note by the Sanitary Commissioner, Madras, No 2164, dated 28th September '98.
Ref. No 837 dated 17th August 1898

In issuing this, Government has obviously elected to run a certain amount of risk, in the hopes of — encouraging inoculation.

It would but little diminish the value of the certificate in the eyes of the inoculated — yet add greatly to Sanitary Safety if to the "Note" at the end of the certificate were — added the words — "but shall not entitle the holder to the exemptions mentioned, until the expiry of 17 days from the date of inoculation." This provision is necessary as the experiments of the German Commission show that immunity is not acquired acquired till the 5th to the 7th day after inoculation. As also inoculation has not been proved to check incubation, a further period of ten days should be added to that required for immunity.

^{note} ~~note~~ Copy of the Sanitary Commission's will be submitted for the orders of Government. People are not often likely to travel until 4 or 5 days have elapsed from the date of inoculation, as up to that time there is generally some pain or fever. Considering that at present plague is not present in Madras City where most of the inoculation is done, I don't think the rule proposed by Dr.
Kiny need be adopted and I greatly fear that if laid down it will do much to hinder the progress of inoculation.
