Ganjam.	R. Kunnuswami Nayudu, Hospital Assistant, No. 563, in medical charge of local fund dispensary, Purushottapur.	Tara-Tarani Hill festival at Raipur, from 4 A.M. to 8 P.M.	6th April 1897.	25,000.	In addition to mango topes at the foot of the hill (a) ten temporary pandals, and (b) eight temporary latrines with sections were constructed.	Twenty temporary wells were dug up in the bed of the river which is close by. Four watchers were employed to keep these wells from pollution.	Twenty-four sweepers were employed.	Nil.	Good.	The following recommendations are made:— (1) As to accommodation—Construction of ten temporary pandals in addition to mango topes. (2) As to water-supply—Digging of twenty temporary wells in the bed of the river, which is close by and which is dry during summer; and employment of five watchers during the festival to keep the water from pollution. (3) As to conservancy, &c.—The construction of eight temporary latrines (four for males and four for females), and employment of sixteen sweepers during the festival. Apparently no arrangements were made for night-soil conservancy. This should be held in mind by the District Sanitary Officer when ascertaining the nature of the arrangements contemplated under G.O., No. 1476 L., dated 8th August 1894, on the next occasion.	W. G.
