8.11.98.

The petrs. state that some rats having died in the arrack shop in their village and a man in a Komati's house in their village having had an attack of what the doctor certifies to be ordinary fever, the authorities thought that plague had attacked the village and the petrs. (the inmates of about 50 houses in the village) were in a body removed to a forest situate on the outskirts of the village. Their houses were pulled down and the articles therein, consisting of wooden furniture and ~~agricultu~~ agricultural implements, burnt. The petrs. have to starve in the woods woods and expose themselves, their children and women - some of whom are pregnant to the chill wind and weather. The petrs are too poor to rebuild their houses. The Plague Commissioner when he last inspected the petrs' village promised to compensate them for the damage done to their houses. As nothing has as yet been done in the matter and as the petrs. still continue to live in the forest they pray that compensation may be granted to them for the destruction of their property.
