Madras
Sir,

In reply to reference on C. No: 1364 P. dated 4th July 1899, and in continuation of my telegram dated 20th July 1899, I have the honour to state that Yallakuru was omitted from the list of Railway stations submitted with this office No: 453 P dated 10th June 1899 as it was thought that it belonged to North Arcot District, and as it was not mentioned either in the Survey list or in the Census list of the district. On reference to the Deputy Tahsildar of Venkatagiri, however, it has since been ascertained that Yellakuru Station is situated in a small uninhabited shrotriem named of Parshivari Khandriga belonging to the Venkatagiri Zamindari and that the boundary line between the North Arcot and Nellore districts has been fixed about a furlong south of the station. It must therefore be borne on the list of Railway Stations (South Indian Railway) in this district. It is further reported that the name Yellakuru is newly coined by the railway authorities for the station as it stands on the borders of two districts. The term means "boundary village".

I have the honor to be,
