In the note which appears in the same proceedings, allusion is made to Railway Servants carrying infection to several places. With regard to this, I beg to say that the only instance we have recorded of a Railway Servant being placed under Supervision, because he or his family were suspected of having plague is that of under guard Macpherson who came to Madras from Bangalore with

with with his wife and child about 2 months ago.

The wife was suffering with fever but it was eventually declared to be not due to plague and they were all discharged after the usual period of observation. They were visited in camp by our medical officer. - If you are aware of other instances, will you kindly give me particulars.

I have the honour to be,
Sir,

Your most obedient servant
