The Madras Tenancy Bill

Vide G. O. No. 92, Legislative, dated 25th Nov. 1897

I regret that I have been quite unable to find the requisite time to scrutinize this important Bill consisting of 174 Sections, and to consider the several controversial questions involved in the Bill, and offer my remarks thereon. I shall not be able to do so before I am relieved about the 20th instant by the newly appointed Advocate General. If Government see no objection to it, I shall, if required, communicate my remarks on this Bill after the commencement of the long vacation in May next.
