Note

The rules under Act I of 1870 have been duly rescinded with the "prior approval of the Governor General

(40-4,000-14-3-95)

H.M. 2.6.97 R. 3.6.97

General in Council" as mentioned in the original draft notification prepared in the office, but the words were ^{Subsequently} omitted as the Honourable Member considered them to be unnecessary. The Government of India now say that the rules should also be rescinded by notification under the said Act. A draft notification has been prepared accordingly, but the Act itself seems defective for the purpose to which it is now put.

While giving power to make rules, it does not, except perhaps by implication, confer any power to rescind rules.

It has been held, I think, that the power to make rules implies necessarily the power to unmake them
