Order No. 556, dated 29th June 1897.

After full consideration the Government recently relaxed the examination rules in favour of light-house superintendents, flag lascars, flag staff signallers, light keepers and boat-overseers, imposing upon candidates for these posts only <sup>at</sup> pass in the compulsory subjects of the Primary examination. The Government is unable to see that any further relaxation of the rules is required. But when persons who have passed the compulsory portion of the Primary examination are not available, unpassed candidates may be appointed to the posts on the condition of their passing the prescribed test before confirmation.
