Proceedings of the Madras Government, Public Works Department,
12th November 1860.

No. 191. Proceedings of the Madras Government, dated 12th November 1860, No. 2,335.

1. The Government have lately waived the demand of security from Executive Engineers in two cases, those of Mr. G. Taylor and Mr. Hawkins, simply because those gentlemen were unable to furnish security; and yet it is in the case of persons who have neither money nor friends able and willing to answer for them, that the artificial and formal guarantee derived from security is specially necessary, if necessary in any case.

2. On a consideration of the whole subject, the Government are of opinion that as respects the Engineer branch of the Department of Public Works the requisition of security may well be given up, without relinquishing any real guarantee for good and faithful conduct; and they desire therefore that the Rules be altered accordingly. They consider however, that the existing Rule as to requisition of security to a small amount from subordinates upper and lower, and also from Storekeepers, may properly be retained.

3. Paragraph 2 of the Chapter on security needs amendment, so as to make the security available, so far as may be necessary, to replace any Government money entrusted to the individual, and not forthcoming; as for instance on examination of an Overseer's cash chest, or loss by robbery under doubtful circumstances. It is uncertain whether the Rule as it stands would include such cases.
