*Extract from the Proceedings of the Government of India, in the Military Department,
No 857, dated the 22nd March 1867.*

"It is evidently desirable that flues shall be provided for in all barracks while in course of construction; but it is apprehended that the provision of open fire-places in these barracks will induce an increased demand for fuel in places where it has not hitherto been found absolutely necessary, and thereby entail heavy additional expense on the Government. It appears, however, that this demand may be guarded against if, in building the barracks, the flues be provided as directed in the Public Works Department, but the fire-places themselves be built up flush, the space they occupy being marked, by a chimney-piece, for the guidance of the Executive Engineer, should it afterwards be found necessary to bring the fire-places into use"
