THE prices quoted are those adopted for issue by the Company for their own use, and they would not in many cases apply to sales to other parties. For instance, the Company find it convenient to charge their own departments one average rate for such things as augers, chisels, files, &c., whatever the size; as, on the whole, all sizes being surplus, the results work out fairly; but the Company will not allow a selection to be made from their surplus stock, and charge only the average price of the whole, irrespective of the size. It is also understood that the consent of the Agent will be necessary before any sale can be made.
