Resolution by the Government of India, Financial Department, dated 22nd August 1878, No. 2,393.

Read the following despatch :—

From the Secretary of State for India, to the Government of India, dated 11th July 1878, No. 233.

Some recent instances having occurred in which your Government has "sanctioned" increases of salaries and establishment "subject to" the "approval" of the Secretary of State, I desire to call your attention to the following remarks on the subject contained in paragraph 13 of the Financial despatch to the Government of India, dated the 26th September 1864, No. 227 :—

"It can hardly have escaped your observation that, in regard to any proposed increase of salaries or establishments, no evil would result if the Home Government should decline to sanction your propositions, but that, when important changes had been authorised by you and carried into effect, the refusal of the Home Government to confirm them would exhibit a marked disapproval of your proceedings, and the individuals whose interests would have been injuriously affected in consequence might not unreasonably expect some compensation."

2. For these reasons I am desirous that, in future, except in a case of great emergency, any changes of this nature should not be carried into effect until the sanction of the Secretary of State shall have been obtained.

Copy forwarded for information and guidance as follows :—
To the several Departments of the Government of India.
To the several Local Governments and Administrations.
