2. The decision of the Government of India was formed on these considerations, but if the Government of Madras is willing to bear Mr. Handley on its establishment during this special leave, it may count from the date of his being relieved in Madras and his proceeding on leave, and the interval between his relief in Burmah and his relief in Madras, should be treated in the usual way.

3. This decision, if accepted by the Government of Madras, should be communicated to Mr. Handley in England, to enable him to get the proper use of his leave.

I have the honor to be,
Sir,
Your most obedient servant,

Alex Fraser Major Genl. R.E.

Secretary to the Govt. of India

Accounts Office, asked for Privilege leave and was told (as was due to the Madras Government to which he belonged and in exact conformity with rules) that he must apply for the consent of the Madras Government. Nothing more was heard of this Privilege leave. But immediately on reaching Madras, he applied for special leave. Now the rules and circumstances of special leave are quite different from those for privilege leave. An officer proceeding on special leave, loses his temporary post and has to revert to his permanent appointment. Hence, in ordinary course, Mr. Handley would then be an Assistant Engineer in Burmah and not a temporary accounts officer of Madras. Moreover, it would be unjust to Madras, unless that Government had specially consented, to propose to saddle it with the leave pay of an officer who virtually had never yet belonged to it. Hence his pay during his special leave must be charged to Burmah and therefore, as he was told, the leave must be given by Burmah. Apparently also it was Mr. Handley's desire not to halt at Madras but to continue his journey homewards. Hence it seemed unavoidable that the journey should be treated as part of his leave, as if he had really started from Burmah with the view of going to England direct on leave. It would therefore be no injustice or hardship to Mr. Handley, while it was but just to Burmah, that the leave should count from his leaving Burmah.

Sir,

With reference to your docket No 1529W dated 18th June 1881, forwarding, for favorable consideration, an application from Mr. Handley, temporary Deputy Examiner of accounts, for a reconsideration of the orders of the Government of India, that his special leave, on which he has recently started, should count from the date on which he was relieved of his duties in British Burmah, I am directed to say that these orders have been simply in conformity with rules and justice and that such complications or hardships, as may appear to be involved in the case, are owing purely to Mr Handley's spasmodic action, as the following facts will explain.
