

Remarks of the Superintending Officer	Registering Officer's explanation.	Registering Officer's remarks.
The office for the Sub Registrar is urgently required. A small room could easily be built at the back of his land room in the sub magistrate's bachelors, and would be a great convenience to all parties. At present the Sub Registrar holds his office in the not too spacious apartment occupied by the Sub Magistrate, and this must be a great inconvenience not only to the officers concerned but to the public who have occasion to attend the office. The cost of the additional room should not I think exceed Rs 250 or 300, and considering how profitable, the operations of the office are this does not seem a large outlay.	More than half a dozen rooms. Some of them have already been addressed by me on this subject. The office is every day being in importance and the present record room is barely enough for the business, but space is required for form, our large table, two chairs, a large bench, two stools, space for the four gunnatahs and two form desks and space also for ordinary burdens resting to the office to stand on.	From the report of the Head Assistant Quarter and that of the Sub Registrar we are convinced that it seems to be necessary, if permitted I shall advise a separate letter on the subject to the Superintending Officer pending the work.

The office for the Sub Registrar is urgently required. A small room could easily be built at the back of his ward room in the sub magistrate's quarters, and would be a great convenience to all parties. At present the Sub Registrar holds his office in the not too spacious apartment occupied by the Sub Magistrate, and this must be a great inconvenience only to the officers concerned but to the public who have occasion to attend the office. The cost of the additional room should not I think exceed Rs 250 or 300 and considering how profitable, the operations of the office are this does not seem a large outlay.	Mr. Khan had a dozen cows. Some months have already been addressed by me on this subject. The office is every day being in importance and the present record room is barely enough for the animals; but space is required for form, one large table, two chairs, a large bench, two stools, space for the form quadrants and two four desks and space also for ordinary bookkeeping in the office to stand in.	From the report of the Head Assistant I gather and that of the sub. He gathers an impression seems to be very necessary, I remarked I shall address a separate letter on the subject to the Inspector General pointing the work.
