view, to construct a verandah along the southern side of the new picture gallery. At present the industrial department is cut off from the educational section by a courtyard, which is during the greater part of the year flooded with sunshine. There exists no other way of getting from one department to the other except through the picture gallery itself which is thus liable to be converted into a general thoroughfare.

The dismantled materials from the old building will be utilized so that the whole cost of this addition will not exceed 300 rupees.
