Name and Description of Building

Remarks

Chetambari —

The rock carvings at Kadugumalai —

Lutierini — A Colossal Stone Jain

image about 6 feet high now preserved

in Lutierini —

Kadugumalai Fresh temple —

about 25 miles

from Ettimparam

The good state of preservation —

The temple was originally Jain though now Hindu, and therefore Hindu people have thrown away other temples in the district. The entire rock is covered with figures of Jain Saints, the inscriptions are in Sanskrit, but the character is believed to be the most ancient yet discovered, apparently identical with the Harishchandra at the same Pagoda —

Kolathur — A small Jain image

There is a small Jain image in the street of this village worshipped by the people who are ignorant of what it represents —

Lutierini — An old Caveling and

Antio Church —

The old Caveling contains some very elaborate Dutch monuments with great coats of arms upon them. The letters in old letters, & the inscriptions often twice painted. They are well kept. The compound wall has been repaired by the Govt. Engineer —

Seerkal — A ruin of an old

Dravidian Church

The Church & ground garden are very high. The nave is 112 x 60 feet. The measurements of the covering of ground in the nave is 100 x 100 —

Panchalankudi — The house of near Chetambari English Officers —

There are the graves of English Officers & Soldiers who fell in the revolt of this district in 1799 —

Seerkal — Numerous Cairns —

Seerkal — Numerous Cairns —

The district is rich in these. Several

Linnæus

Others appear to have been exhausted, & in their more good shells, horns, & other needs, & now in places. These various data lead to the fairer times —

This is the ancient capital of the Indians Xicgo. The basement of the old temple is covered with ancient Sazil inscriptions
 according to Fruto. I had for temple stones
