Read—the following letter from J. W HANDLEY, Esq, Chief Judge, Small Cause Court, Madras, to the Officiating Chief Secretary to Government, dated 22nd August 1883, No 393 —

I have the honor to request that His Excellency the Governor in Council will be pleased to give the necessary orders in the Public Works Department for the erection of a shed with a terraced roof, 47 feet by 20½ feet, to cover that portion of the yard attached to the Small Cause Court where the auction sales of attached property are held. At present these sales are held in the open air, and consequently have to be suspended when rain comes on, and in fine weather the officials conducting, and the public attending, sales are exposed to the heat of the sun, as the sales begin early in the afternoon. Moreover, such a shed is also required for protecting the carriages, carts and similar articles under attachment, which at present have to be left in the open yard, exposed to the sun and rain, to their serious detriment. Property of all kinds attached in execution of decrees now remains much longer than formerly in the custody of the Court, Act XIV of 1882 having substituted fifteen days for the five days during which, under the old law, attached property was required to be kept before sale. It is therefore all the more necessary to protect such articles as cannot be kept inside the building from injury by sun and rain.

2 Such a shed as above proposed was included in the budget estimate of this Court for 1881, but as the necessary materials were not then procurable, the money had to be returned on 1st November 1881.

Order—dated 30th August 1883, Mis No 2288, Judicial
