Comm. Architects note

No 1281 & 20.12.83.

The price charged by the Gun Carriage Factory is only nominally higher than that of the English Article, as the former will be little more than a book adjustment.
The metal &c must all be available in the factory - Post & Telegraph & the G. C. Factory are moreover both Imperial.

The whole of the price charged for the English article will be actual cash outlay.

The difference in price is so marked the indent might I think go home.
It is true what you say about the book adjustment, but there will be an essential difference of Rs. 1100 or so in the Revised cost of the building, & the Revised estimate now I believe under preparation might be kept down as much as possible.

C.A. thanks D.W. for the above suggestion. But he finds the Royal Coat of Arms made for Govt by the Gun Carriage Factory cost all told Rs 1707 delivered at Madras. This did not include ^{cost} of erection. The Arms supplied by Manufacture with cost put up and all Rs 600.

Draft in usual form submitted, but it is a question whether the Coat of Arms might not be cast by the local Gun Carriage Factory.

Some years ago when the Comdg. Architect proposed to get from England a Royal Coat of Arms for Fort House Calcutta
the Duke of Buckingham stopped the indent, & had the work done at the Gun Carriage Factory. The Comdg.
