Mr. Wallnutt originally went to Madras on 12th July on casual leave for Medical advice. As he did not return within 30 days, he was placed on half pay from date of departure. The Medical Officer in charge of the Madras General Hospital where Mr. Wallnutt was under treatment, having in answer to my request furnished an opinion that he would not be fit for duty for a considerable time in addition, the case was referred to the Madras Government, and they ruled that Mr. Wallnutt should draw Rs 375 per month salary from 12th July, the Examiner having certified that he was entitled to 3 months Sick leave on half pay. Subsequently, the Madras Government in their No. 2255W of 13th September/84 decided on dispensing with Mr. Wallnutt's Services, and in accordance with their instructions, a month's notice was given him by this Office No. 3446 of 21st Ultimo. As however his 3 months Sick leave expires on 12th Instant, he cannot draw his half pay after the expiration thereof without a further Sanction from the Madras Government for the additional 10 days required to work out his month's notice.

Mr. Wallnutt is stated to have arrived at Madras on the 12th July. Three months leave from that date would expire on the 12th October. Do you see any objection to the months Notice to which Mr. Wallnutt is entitled under the terms of his engagement, having effect from the last mentioned date? Mr. Wallnutt would then draw full pay from the 12th October to the 11th November.

There would have been no objection provided he had returned to duty on the 12th October 1884, but as owing to continued sickness, Mr. Wallnutt did not return to work. I am of opinion that the Government are not liable to pay him anything beyond the half pay passed to him for 3 months.

Mr. Wallnut not having returned to duty may be considered to have failed in his engagement and in that light is not entitled to any notice from Government.
