I do not agree to this. Temporary staff require clerks, it appears to me, just as much as permanent men do. It has nothing to say to the question that there are at present 3 supernumerary clerks already. Either the extra clerk is required or he is not, and the S. E. who must be the best judge, says that he is required. I would therefore sanction the establishment of an additional clerk when services the S. E. should be instructed to dispense with as soon as he is no longer required.
