G. O. No. 2150 W. dated 12th. August
1887.

Would you please ascertain from the Government of India in what manner furlough earned in the military department is to be calculated in the case of, an officer who had less than eight years service in that department before entering Civil employment. I presume that, in respect of that period, he should be held to have earned as furlough one-fourth of his active service counting for furlough, that being the proportion which he would have earned at the end of the eighth year; but the example given throws no light on this point, as the case supposed is that of an officer who had more than eight years service in the military
