Please see C's remarks.

The S.E. does not say that work was stopped in the cases in which deposits were exceeded.

In order as regards the Gov's suggestion that completed work should be retained until fully paid for. This would hardly be desirable when the excesses are small, or when work is wanted in a hurry.

I consider that the rule regarding pre-payment for work should be cancelled.

The Gov's suggestion would cause a great deal of unnecessary inconvenience.

The Gov is now framing an S.O. on this subject.

SIR,

Enclosures.

With reference to G. C.

No. 2542 W dated 18th August 1888,
I have the honor to report that except in the case of work done for the Political Agent who has always been regarded as a Government officer - prepayment of the estimated cost was obtained in all the other cases. The sums shown against these other cases in the Examiner's letter No. 2033 of 8th August 1888 are the excesses over the estimated cost previously deposited. These sums as well as the cost of work executed for the

No. 2358 of 3-10-88

There is no rule requiring the stopping of Workshop jobs in the event of the deposit being exceeded, and I do not think they should be held to come under the rule relating to contribution (Code para 1342 IV). The most that should be required is, I think, that the finished work should be retained until fully paid for, and if this view is approved, such excesses will not be again noticed.
