W.

Code para 1878 prescribes special rules for the treatment of materials transferred from "works" to "stock", but is silent as regards the treatment of materials, other than the produce or out-turn from manufacture, that may be transferred from the site of a manufacturing operation to "stock".

2. Presumably the same rules should apply, as "manufactures" should in all respects be treated as "works", but as it is not specifically laid down, the rules are not followed, and a case has recently occurred where owing to their non-observance sanction was accorded to certain perishable materials (fuse) at the site of a manufacture being transferred to stock and allowed to lie there until they were worthless, when the value was again re-transferred to the manufacture account.

3. To prevent the occurrence of similar transactions, it appears desirable to make the rule in code para —
