I am of opinion that a bank on the left side of the Sadilam near ~~that~~ portion which I state to be for some distance below the bridge, would be a mistake unless the Pommiar were so embanked that no water could get from it to Iramiakkapam, and thence as probably it has been accustomed to do before the bank in 1884 cut off the water course from the Pommiar and Iramiakkapam canal which has been stopped by a bank from Guidelli to the Sadilam, unless would have been worse than it was.

The condition of the case are very dissimilar from those of the embankment put up to prevent flood waters of the Sadilam from leaving its just above a bend and describing with great force thro' Attapalpalayam in its way back to the same river lower down.
