GOVERNMENT OF MADRAS.

REVENUE DEPARTMENT.

READ—the following letter from C. J. LYALL, Esq., C.I.E., Officiating Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department (Census), to the Secretary to the Government of Madras, Revenue Department, dated Simla, the 23rd May 1890, No. 98 :—

With reference to paragraph 2 of your letter, No. 244B, dated the 28th March last, in which it is stated that the Government of Madras is strongly of opinion that the census in that Presidency should be taken in the early morning instead of at night, I am directed to convey the following observations.

2. At the conference of former Census Superintendents held at Agra in December last, all the officers, except the delegate from Madras, were in favor of a night census. Their experience as District officers and in the working of past censuses indicated that by the end of February the population was mostly on the move by day-break, both in town and country, and that an executive order was not enough to persuade people to remain at home at that time pending the visit of the enumerator. It appears to the Government of India that these views are reasonable. The final enumeration, which will consist in checking and correcting the schedule on the appointed date, is an operation which will take some time. If begun in the early morning, when the population to be enumerated may possibly be still at home, it cannot be ended for the enumerator's circle before some hours have elapsed, when it is next to certain that many people will have gone out to their work. On the other hand, approximately the whole population will be at home during the hours of darkness and the verification of the schedule will be performed without difficulty or risk of error, and, as each household will be prepared for the enumerator's visit, there does not appear to be any reason to apprehend that it will cause irritation. It is understood that most of the enumerators will be karnams, who do not work in the fields and can easily arrange to take their rest in the daytime.

For these reasons, while most reluctant to overrule the Government of Madras in such a matter, the Governor-General in Council would greatly prefer that in that Presidency, as elsewhere in India, arrangements should be made on this occasion for taking the census, except in the special tracts, during the night of the 26th February 1891.

ORDER—dated 4th June 1890, No 402, Revenue.

Census, No. 18:

In compliance with the wishes of the Government of India, communicated in the letter read above, His Excellency the Governor in Council is pleased to direct that the census of 1891 be taken at night in the Madras Presidency as elsewhere in India.

2. There will be some special tracts in which a night enumeration will be impossible, and Collectors should at once submit a statement of such areas, together with the reasons for their exclusion from the ordinary procedure. These statements should be forwarded through the Superintendent of Census Operations. A day enumeration will be permitted only when, owing to the wildness of the country, it is impossible to get enumerators to take the census at night, so the special tracts will be neither numerous nor large.
