10TH FEBRUARY 1890, No. 190, PENSION.

GOVERNMENT OF MADRAS.
PENSION DEPARTMENT.

READ—the following letter from T. W. RAWLINS, Esq., Accountant-General to the Government of Madras, to the Secretary to Government, Pension Department, dated Fort St. George, 10th January 1890, No. 36:—

I have the honor to point out, for the information of Government, that in claims for pension it is very frequently reported that the service cannot be verified from office records, and verbal and contemporary evidence is, therefore, taken to support the service claimed. Evidence of this kind is rarely satisfactory: the dates and continuity of another's employment and the authority for his entertainment are not matters of which a fellow officer or a friend is likely to retain an accurate recollection even if bona fides could always be counted on; yet, in spite of the objections to oral evidence, it is very rare that any attempt is made (so far as I can gather from papers submitted) to substitute for it the evidence of contemporaneous official records which should in many cases prove valuable. For instance, the service of an English clerk or accountant could be verified by his handwriting or initials in registers, office copies of letters, and books of account; that of court clerks by files of civil and criminal cases; that of process peons by the same means and by the process-serving registers; and that of all by the office order book. Other instances might be given, but enough has been said to indicate sources of proof that are little used, and I venture to suggest that, if heads of office were instructed to make a more careful search for evidence, Government would not be so often called upon to grant pensions for services which have been inadequately proved.

ORDER—dated 10th February 1890, No. 190, Pension.

The foregoing letter from the Accountant-General will be communicated to all heads of departments who will be instructed to make use of contemporaneous official records, when they exist, in preference to oral testimony in the verification of entries in service books.
