PROCEEDINGS OF THE MADRAS GOVERNMENT.

Read the following paper:—

From the Inspector General of Jails, of 20th January 1893, No 976.

On inspecting the Rajahmundry Central Jail in November last, I found that no separate accommodation exists either for Civil Prisoners or for Undertrials. x x x x.

2. The case of the Undertrial prisoners does not call for any immediate change, but the provision of separate accommodation for Civil Prisoners is urgently necessary. x x x x.

3. There is no site inside the jail where a Civil Debtors' yard could conveniently be placed, but I think that the necessary accommodation can be provided at small cost just outside the Main Gate by converting the so-called Warders' Hospital into a Civil Debtors' block, and enclosing a yard round it by a railing. The building which was erected as a Warders' Hospital is entirely useless for that purpose. x x x x.

4. This building measures 37' x 17' and has

has this superficial area sufficient for 15 Civil Prisoners. The total number of male Civil prisoners received into the Rajahmundry Central jail annually during the three years ending 1891 has averaged only 11, while the daily average population of this class has been about 1.25.

5. The alterations necessary in order to convert it into a Civil Debtors block would not, I think, be very expensive. The bars of the windows are of wood, and should be replaced with iron; a fresh door would be needed; and a small cookroom would have to be built.
There is already a latrine. The encircling railing would be the only expensive item, and it might be cheaper to build a stone wall similar to that in course of erection round the Quarantine yard. The building is so near the Chain Gate that it can be guarded by the Chain Gate Sentry and will not create a fresh post. I have, therefore, the honour to request that the Public Works Department may be instructed to prepare the necessary plans and estimates.

Order, 13th February 1893, No 337.

The necessary orders will issue in the Public Works Department.
