GOVERNMENT OF MADRAS.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

Read—the following paper:—

From R. A. GAMBLE, Esq., Officiating Under Secretary to the Government of India, Finance and Commerce Department, to the Chief Secretary to the Government of Madras, dated Simla, 28th September 1893, No. 4187-A.

I am directed to forward, for the information of the Government of Madras, the accompanying extract (paragraphs 30 to 32) from a despatch from Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, No. 158, Financial, dated the 10th August 1893, regarding measures involving increase of expenditure.

Enclosure.

Extract paragraphs 30 to 32 from a Despatch from Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, No. 158, Financial, dated the 10th August 1893.

30. I must point out that the Military Department is only one branch of your Government; that the various propositions for incurring further expenditure are only sanctioned with the understanding, either expressed or implied, that money can be found to meet it; and that it is impossible for the administration to be properly conducted, if the large spending departments are allowed to carry into effect continual changes involving expenditure for which your Government in the Financial Department is unable to make provision, both immediately and in the future; for, when once such points are decided, it is scarcely possible to reconsider them at the last moment, after the arrangements for the year have arrived at such a point that they cannot be altered without serious inconvenience.

31. I desire, therefore, that you will cause a searching examination to be made of the military expenditure under the various heads, with the view of ascertaining what retrenchment is practicable; and that, as far as possible, you will discourage proposals for additional outlay.

32. Civil Expenditure.—The same remarks apply, of course, to the civil expenditure in a minor degree; but, as this is to a great extent under the control of the Provincial Governments, they have a direct interest in confining it within due bounds. It must, however, be remembered that expenditure authorized during the currency of an agreement, on the ground that the funds of the Provincial Government are adequate to meet it, will make it more difficult for the Imperial Government in framing a new agreement to claim its full share of the improvement which may have taken place, and, therefore, additional payments should only be sanctioned when really necessary and not merely because the balances of the particular Provincial Government may be able to meet the expenditure at the moment.
