The G. of I. at present usually send ~~up~~ us 80 (eighty) spare copies of Circulars or Resolutions on general subjects – they at the same time address a separate copy of the paper to the Railway Branch, & send 46 spare copies with it. All these copies are wasted, as the Resolutions are invariably embodied in our Printed Pros. copies of which are sent to our offices. The G. of I. spare copies have to be ~~kept~~ destroyed or the end of the box.

It is quite unnecessary to send separately to the Ry. Branch a signed copy with set of spare copies of Resolutions on General subjects. The two signed copies are always pinned together & disposed of by one and order in W Branch, which is communicated to A.R. in ordinary course.

3 spare copies of each paper are now suggested, so that a spare copy may always be at hand for reference when the original papers are in circulation or in the Press.

After we have once printed a Resolution, the 2. or 3. spare copies will be of no further use.

G. L. No: 2927 W dated 14th Novr/93

To,

The Secretary to the Government of India
P. W. D.

Sir,

In reply to your letter no: 2518 G. dated 27th September 1893, I am directed to forward a statement showing the number of spare copies of Circulars, resolutions and printed letters required by this office so far as regards Irrigation, Buildings and Roads, and General subjects. A separate report will be sent with respect to papers on on Railway subjects.

(40—2,000—18-5-93.)

2. In explanation of the small demand for spare copies of Circulars &c intended for "Heads of Departments" and "General Distribution," I am to state that all such papers are embodied in the printed Proceedings of this Government, and that the large number of spare copies usually forwarded by your office are not required.

3. I am to add that it is unnecessary to address separately to the Railway branch in this Presidency copies of Circulars and resolutions on matters affecting all branches of the Department, as the orders of this Government on such papers are communicated to all branches by the Secretary.
