would in some respects be very convenient. But every year some estimates arrive very late; last year, for instance, I did not receive the estimates noted in the margin until the 15th of January. I have to despatch the budget on the 15th and it is obvious that in the time left it would have been impossible for me to take whatever action was necessary in my own office and send on the proofs to the Government Press and for the latter to make any necessary corrections, work up the forms in their proper place in the consolidated budget, and print off the whole in time for despatch on due date. It appears to me that the Government of India would be unwilling to risk the punctuality of the budget on the possible success of a hitherto untried experiment, and I venture to suggest that, if Government consider it desirable to have the departmental estimates printed in the consolidated form, they should try the experiment for one year and then propose the change to the Government of India if the results proved that it could with safety and convenience be made.

ORDER—dated 22nd September 1894, No. 775, Financial.

The Government is of opinion that, in view of the savings that would ultimately be effected, the experiment is worth a trial.

2. The Accountant-General may prepare the consolidated Civil Estimates in manuscript, as heretofore, so as to have them ready for despatch to the Government of India by the due date.

3. The Superintendent, Government Press, will, however, recast the budget estimates as passed by Government in accordance with the forms of the printed Civil Estimates for 1895–96 supplied from Calcutta and will furnish five copies to the Accountant-General, who will carry out such alterations as may be necessary, calling for fresh proofs as required. The Superintendent, Government Press, will use his best endeavours to comply with the Accountant-General's requisitions in every respect, and will make suitable arrangements for the work being continued without interruption during the Christmas holidays.

4. The Revenue Department should arrange to pass all its estimates punctually by the due date, 15th November.

5. In case of any delay occurring, the manuscript copy of the Civil Estimates may be despatched to the Government of India, as usual, a printed copy being subsequently submitted.

MEMORANDUM.

No. 1520.

With reference to G.O., Financial, dated 19th July 1894, No. 558, the Accountant-General is requested to be so good as to state whether, in his opinion, it would not be more convenient to print the consolidated civil estimates of the Madras Presidency locally at the Government Press instead of at Calcutta.

It will be seen that it is proposed to print the departmental estimates here in extenso exactly in the form adopted by the Government of India; the arrangement suggested above would prevent double printing. When once the departmental estimates are passed by Government, the Accountant-General would be at liberty to recast the forms and consolidate the local estimates as he pleased, utilising the printed explanations for his own purposes. The budget estimates of January might then possibly be forwarded to the Government of India in print. This would render the work easier for the Accountant-General, as several proofs would be at his disposal instead of a single manuscript copy as at present. Any corrections rendered necessary by the budget notes might be carried out by the Accountant-General himself, the forms being kept standing until the final corrections and alterations were completed. The number of copies required by the Government of India for its own purposes would of course be furnished to it.

The Department of Finance and Commerce may be consulted if necessary.

From T. W. RAWLINS, Esq., Accountant-General to the Government of Madras, to the Chief Secretary to Government, dated Fort St. George, 9th August 1894, No. 2328.

In reply to your memorandum No. 1520, dated the 27th July 1894, I have the honour to state that if it were absolutely certain that I should receive all the departmental estimates sufficiently early, and if a sufficient printing staff were in attendance at the Government Press throughout the Christmas holidays, the scheme proposed
