With reference to your No. 274 S.L., dated 5th instant, whose enclosures are here-with returned, I have the honour to inform you that the walls of the existing building are constructed of rough stone in chunam, but the roof is made of palmyrah rafters, venteak reepers, flat and pan tiles and the verandah posts, bressummers and wall plates of venteak. All public buildings constructed on the hills in recent years, such as Deputy Tahsildar's and his clerks' quarters, police huts and station, are of rough stone in mud, as every material except stones has to be carried up the hill from the plains by head-loads. The extensions of the Tahsildar's office are therefore proposed to be built of rough stone in mud plastered inside and pointed outside with chunam.
