Sir,

I have the honour to report, for the information of the Government of India, on the training received by the thirteen assistant engineers on their practical course in the year just ending, 1894-95.

P. Hawkins served on the Newport Waterworks Wales, which he joined just as the work commenced. Consequently, he has been mostly employed in preliminary details, such as temporary railway construction and lining out, temporary offices, and erection of plant, &c. The excavation of the puddle trench is nearly completed, and the outlet tunnel is at the same stage. The designs and drawings for the scheme are by no means complete even yet, and consequently there is no great scope for note taking. On the other hand, he has had a great deal of experience in the actual carrying out of works, and his time has been mostly spent out of doors, laying out, surveying, aligning or supervising. He has also visited other works as follows:- the Glasgow Underground Railway, Severn Tunnel, Newport Docks, the Cardiff Waterworks, the Worthing Sewage Works, and Blackwall Tunnel.

M.R. Kharegat. This assistant served his twelve months on the Worthing Sewage Works, where a complete and instructive system was practically carried out during this time.

This

This comprises sewer design and construction, design and construction of pumping arrangements for sewage with a sea outfall, and high level storage tanks in full detail. Also preliminary works and designs for Worthing Waterworks were noted on, and the following outside works visited, viz., Cardiff and Birmingham Waterworks, Glasgow Underground Railway.

I have, &c.,

R. G. Kennedy.

There is no objection to the Executive Engineer's proposal to forego rent - vide Code volume I, chapter X, para 28 III(d), but the approval of the Military Department would appear necessary to the occupation of the military buildings by the police constables.
