No. 12. K.R.

MEMORANDUM.

Enclosures.

His No 625.I. dated 30 April 1897.

It is presumed that a fairly good idea can be obtained from existing works of the area that can be irrigated per square mile of catchment having regard to the nature of the country and other circumstances which influence the run-off. It is suggested to the Supp. Engineer that before abandoning the Alamkonda Project, which though not in any case likely to be a financial success may perhaps be useful as a famine relief work, he should have the estimate revised reducing the capacity of the tank to the quantity required for the area which it is anticipated may be irrigated. If this area be taken at 100 acres the required capacity of the tank might be taken as 22 millions cubic feet.
