Copy of letter No. 74 m, dated 2nd May 1896, from P. Roscoe Allen Esquire, Executive Engineer, Trichinopoly Division, to the District Judge, Trichinopoly, No. 236 TC, dated 4th February 1897: -

I have the honour to inform you that I have inspected the building occupied by the District Munsiffs of Trichinopoly and Srirangam as their Court houses; for purpose of this report the building may be divided into 2 separate parts the one occupied by the District Munsif of Trichinopoly and the other by that of Srirangam.

2. The room occupied as a Court in the first named portion by the Munsiff of Trichinopoly is an upstairs room with a terraced roof. The roof is safe and timber sound as also the walls. There is however no facility for the rain water to run off the roof where it stagnates. The room is very small indeed and at any time the atmosphere in it is anything but desirable; what it must be when a case of importance is being heard can only be imagined and at any time must be very detrimental to health. The Court room has access to a terraced roof over a record room. This is not provided with a parapet wall and is eminently dangerous as I hear many people resort there for a breath of air during the hearing of a case.

3. The Clerks and record rooms are all on the basement. The rooms are all small and stuffy and the walls in some places are cracked but not dangerously. So on the whole I consider the building as a safe one but eminently unsuitable as a Court house.

4. That portion of the building occupied by the District Munsiff of Srirangam consists of two large lofty rooms with verandahs with a roof built after the native fashion and covered with country tiles. The tiles have got displaced and the roof leaks. The timbers of the roof are not all sound and require attention. The establishment of the District Munsiff complain that bats lodge in the roof and their droppings fall all over the area of each room all day long spoiling papers and creating a nuisance. There is nothing unsafe about this building which has a fine airy cool court house but it certainly requires reroofing to keep out the rains and the roof should be of such a pattern as would prevent bats lodging in it.

Memorandum No. 1231

Read the following paper:—

The Public Works Department is requested to instruct the Executive Engineer, Trichinopoly Division, to prepare and submit to Government plans and estimate for reroofing the portion of the building now occupied by the District Munsif of Srirangam. It is observed that the owner has already executed some of the repairs suggested in Executive Engineer's letter to the District Judge, Trichinopoly, No. 74, dated 2nd May 1896 and apparently no other repairs appear to be absolutely necessary.
