Sir,

Enclosures.

The question has arisen as to whether the salaries of subordinates of other departments (Local Funds, salt &c) temporarily transferred to this department for employment on famine relief works, should be paid by their own department or by the P. W. D., and I have the honour to request the favour of orders on the subject.

2. I think it would be best that they should be paid by the Public Works Department, and I also think that ~~the~~ Superintending Engineers should be empowered to increase salaries and allowances of such men while engaged on famine relief work, if they consider it advisable to do so, to bring them into line with those of other temporary subordinates doing similar work.

I have the honour to be,

I agree in thinking that it would be perhaps simpler, and, in other respects, more advisable if the duty of paying such men were recognized as resting with the P.W.D; but if this view is supported, the same procedure should of course be followed in all Divisions, and clear and definite instructions issued accordingly.
