In this office letter to Government, No. 184 G, dated 1st June 1896, attention was drawn to the state of the Port Office building at Cochin. In October last, the Port Officer informed me that the building had been inspected by the Assistant Engineer, West Coast Division, who had expressed an opinion that it would not be safe for occupation during the next S. W. Monsoon and that it should be replaced by a new building at a very early date. On the receipt of this report, I at once addressed the Superintending Engineer, IVth Circle, on the subject. See copy of letter attached, but no action

2. Having recently visited Cochin I inspected the Port Office, found the building in a very bad condition, and I do not think it could be used during the rainy season.

of Government in view of the Superintending Engineer being called on for an explanation as to the delay in taking measures either to repair the building, if practicable, or to prepare plans and estimates for a new office.
