2nd September 1898.

Sir,

The returned packing account of Remittance Stores shipped to Madras by the S.S."Orissa" on the 21st August 1897, which reached me on the 22nd August 1898, shows that 11 pieces of rough plate glass were found broken in Case 726, the breakage being considered to be due to bad packing.

After so long an interval it would, I fear, be quite impossible to maintain any claim against the suppliers for the loss, which, in view of the fact that no breakage occurred in either of the other cases, may perhaps be due to a fall or a blow.

In all cases where a claim for damage has to be made against a supplier it is essential that it should be made at the earliest possible date, and that evidence should be produced as to the absence of any signs of external injury.

Where bad packing is alleged it is most important that full
