When I was temporarily removed to Madras in the middle of 1871 I gave Lakshman Sing attender in the Salt Deputy Collector's Office the certificate which I have copied below, and now on the occasion of my transfer to another District I have much pleasure to certify here that in the seven years that have elapsed since the date of the subjoined certificate he has continued to maintain the character I then gave him. —

Nellore 23rd May 78 Chas. E. Plunkett.

Nellore 11th April 1871. —

Lakshman Sing, attender in the Office of the Deputy Collector in charge of the Salt Department, Nellore District, is a pains-taking and good old man, and most attentive to his duties. — He is a very old servant of Government having been in employ as he says since 1833, and he has been attached to the Deputy Collector's Office some two years now. — He has a fair knowledge of Telugu and he may be regarded as the Telugu Record-Keeper of the Deputy Collector's Office; — he is one of the very few men of his class who does his duty without being urged or told to do it, and in proper time and place. —
