Has been on leave since July 1892 and is now unable to return to duty owing to general weakness, cough and defective vision. Has been suffering off and on for the past four years from a distressing cough accompanied with slight fever; since last year, the cough has become worse and occasionally he has brought up some blood. There is dulness at both apices of the lungs, the left being more marked, where tubular breathing with an occasional crepitation, is heard. The breath sounds are also roughened in character. Tubular breathing is also heard at the base of the left lung, posteriorly. Cough is very troublesome and distressing and expectoration is scanty and mucopurulent. Has lost flesh and is weak and debilitated. Heart sounds are normal; suffers from dyspnœa on exertion. Appetite is poor. Has also cataract of both eyes, the right being more advanced. I consider him unfit for further service.
