Patient was illfed, and consequently debilitated and emaciated. His vision has been gradually failing for the last 6 months, so much so that he gropes and staggers in finding his way into a room. The pupils dilate irregularly under atropine showing the existence of Posterior Synechiae. Ophthalmoscopic examination shows the vessels to be few and attenuated, excepting the central artery of the retina which is rather dilated. Rest and treatment for 6 months have proved of no avail. The disease does not appear to have been caused by irregular or intemperate habits.
