I presume for the position of the accused, a village mississ allowed him the at large, little thinking that he would abscond.

Finding that this would probably get him into trouble, the S. H. & Co. immediately tries to throw all blame of the escape on to 2nd Lt. and Co. 613 B. Indian P. A. This

In his defence, Lee to 669 states that the accused escaped while actually under the escort of cons 623, but, then

I see no reason whatever to doubt the statements of the complainant and witnesses as they are not interested one way or the other and that is that they

As matters stand the position of the accused, if he was arrested, as the S. N. C. admits, he should have been confined just as strictly as any other prisoner.

He has too not behaved in a straight forward manner in trying to put the blame on one of his constables when he must have known that he alone was responsible.
