Narasimooloo is a retiring
pensioner, and the Govt. of India has deprecated the reemployment
of police constables in receipt of superannuation or retiring pensions. Hence draft order for approval.

Requesting that G.O. 155
8-3-99
Pns may be reconsidered and that the reemployment of pensioners or G. Narasimooloo may be sanctioned as a special case.

Is there any rule under which we can sanction it as a special case?

Is there any rule absolutely prohibiting sanction even as a special case?

Sir,

Art. 576 C.S.R. says that an officer who has obtained
a retiring pension cannot be reemployed in the General service except on strong public grounds & with the express

Sanction P.T.O.

sanction of the Govt. of India in the Fin^{ce} Dep^t or, if the pensions are a Provincial Charge, of the Local Govt.

In the present case, the pension is a Provincial Charge and if 'strong public grounds' are shown, the Govt. can sanction the reemployment. The D^y Adjutant General only says that C. Narasimooloo has been a very trustworthy servant and done excellent service for the last 11 years, and was employed at a time when there were very few desirable applicants for the post; but does not show strong public grounds for the permanent reemployment of the pensioner.

In G.O. 954/16-8-88 the reemployment of a pensioned police Constable was sanctioned as the necessity of obtaining trustworthy watchers for regular offices and the like was treated as a strong public ground.

But the Govt. of India has ^{now} deprecated the reemployment of pensioned police constables even in cases such as that of the man "who though unfit for the arduous duties of a Constable at the time of retirement was yet perfectly capable of performing the light work of a bungalow keeper."
