ORDER THEREON, 21st February 1867, No. 77.

Koyimadathil Shastavayan, late 2nd Class District Moonsiff of Irvenad, having completed 34 years 8 months and 5 days' service qualifying for pension, was thrown out of employment on the 1st August 1866, in consequence of the abolition of his Court.

2. The applicant is, therefore, under Section 7 of the Revised Rules, entitled to a Good Service Pension of Rupees 105 per mensem, equal to a moiety of his salary during the last five years of his service.

3. It appears from the Register that the applicant was once suspended and on another occasion dismissed, and under ordinary circumstances as the Government do not grant Good Service Pension, except as the reward of approved and unblemished service a deduction should have been made in the pension granted; but taking into consideration that the suspension was inflicted so long ago as 1842, that the applicant was on the second occasion reinstated by order of a superior Court, and that he has been debarred from enjoying the emoluments attached to the office which he last held, by abolition of his Court, the Government will not make any reduction in the amount of pension to be granted.

4. The Government cannot comply with the recommendation of the Civil and Sessions Judge that a larger pension than that sanctioned by the Rules be granted to the applicant.

5. A pension of Rupees (105) one hundred and five per mensem is, therefore, granted to Koyimadathil Shastavayan with arrears from the 1st August 1866, payable from the Treasury of the Collector of Malabar.
