Lutchmenarrain Row was dismissed by me on the 8th December 1864 for gross misconduct after having been repeatedly warned and once fined – His dismissal was affirmed by the High Court on appeal. He then appealed to Government who enquired of me whether a more lenient punishment than absolute dismissal would not suffice. I replied in the negative, but Government deeming the punishment he had then undergone of about nine months deprivation of office sufficient, directed his reemployment in his old or similar appointment, which was done – Lutchme Narrain Row is a man in whom I have not the smallest confidence and unless he entirely changes his mode of life & practices he is not in my opinion a fit person to be entrusted with any responsible duty. This opinion I have formed after fifteen months experience.
