if a party to such suits pays a large sum to Saravana, he usually gives recommendatory notes to the judges concerned to give a decision in favour of that party. This practice is also a matter of great grievance. 3. While petitioner was a Sirkar servant, some of his enemies won over Saravana by payment of money and contrived to ruin him. In pursuance of letters written by Saravana (to the authorities concerned) a case was conducted against him and he was accordingly dismissed the service. Petitioner represented his grievances to (Saravana) but he was told that in case he paid Rs 1000 he would be reappointed. As petitioner is unable to pay such a heavy sum, he has no other alternative but to suffer. There are many others in the same position as the petitioner and suffering similarly. Recently a Jossain (religious mendicant?) was for having visited (the place?) without any purpose transported without the order of the Maharaja. Several of Saravana's costumers have been granted Sanads for practising as vakils in all the courts of the state, and through Kanne Gan, one of such vakils practising in Kottarakara Munsif's court, several suits were dismissed as false, parties being consequently put to trouble and loss. 4. Petitioner therefore prays that His Excellency will be pleased to afford protection to the subjects of Travancore who who groan under the oppression of Sankhara by removing him from the State and keeping him under the British surveillance.
