W.D. J.P.

I would say in regard to the levy of tolls that orders will hereafter be passed - a great outcry is being raised in many directions as to the manipulation arising out of the new system of tolls levied and it has been said that it is inadvisable to abstain from extending the system in point of fact; has carried us back to the days of 1832/33 and the various regulations created by the old charter era - I think the subject may perhaps be considered by the Government when we again have a full Council.
