PONDICHERRY, 27th September 1869.

No. 143. From the Protector of Emigrants, to the Chief Secretary to Government, Fort Saint George, dated Madras, — October 1869, No. 126-M.

I have the honour to forward the report called for in Government Order, Madras Government, Public Department, of the 30th September 1868, No. 1231, on the working of the order "that the minimum proportion of female emigrants be fixed at forty to one hundred males" with special reference to the class of women recruited.

2. Enclosed you will find reports* from the British Consul at Pondicherry, the British Consul at Karikal, and the Mauritius Emigration Agent at Madras.

* A., B., and C.

† British Consular Agent, Pondicherry, to the Protector of Emigrants, 2nd October 1869, No. 378.

3. The British† Consul at Pondicherry believes there is difficulty in recruiting the required number of forty women to one hundred men, but considers they are generally of good character.

4. From my own personal observation of many of the female emigrants brought to me for registration, en route to the Pondicherry Dépôt, I would beg to observe that I cannot agree with the Consul's opinion as to their character, and consider they are principally of the same class‡ as those recruited for the Mauritius at Madras.

‡ Vide paragraph 8.

B.
§ British Consular Agent, Karikal, to the Protector of Emigrants, 1st October 1869, No. 168.

5. The Consul§ at Karikal reports that there has been no difficulty in procuring the required percentage of women, but that their morality is of a questionable standard, and that respectable women will not emigrate.

|| 14th Oct. 1869, No. 160.
¶ 8th June 1869, No. 54.

6. The Mauritius Emigration Agent in his report||, and a letter¶ previously addressed to Government, enters very fully into the matter at issue.

7. Four vessels have been despatched from 1st October 1868 to September 30th, 1869: in three the full complement of women was sent, but more men might have been sent in the fourth ship, had the Agent been able to procure more women, which he could not do. In one ship the proportion of women was only thirty to one hundred regarding which the Agent sent in an explanation which was accepted.

 8th June 1869, No. 54.

8. In both the report and letter of June 8th, 1869, the Agent testifies to the extreme difficulty of procuring the requisite percentage of female emigrants, even though he made a practice of admitting confirmed prostitutes, and other women whose character would not bear investigation.

9. During the past year, I have been careful to note and make inquiries regarding the character of the women in the Mauritius Dépôt, and entirely agree with the remarks of the Agent.

10. There are few married emigrants who take with them their wives and children, and I am certain that many of the women who say they are married to particular men are not their wives, as they very often take up with other men in the Dépôt before embarkation.

11. As to the so called single women, many of them are prostitutes, others are kept women, and the remainder, after entering the Dépôt in almost every case, attach

From the British Consular Agent at Karikal, to the Protector of Emigrants at Madras, dated Karikal, 1st October 1869, No. 168.

Agreeably to the Order of Government, dated 30th September 1868, No. 1231, I have the honour to report that since the receipt of the proportion of females to males embarked for the French Colonies has been forty per cent., and no difficulty has been experienced hitherto in procuring that number.

2. With regard to the second paragraph of the order I beg to state that the women recruited are of all castes (Brahmins excepted,) but chiefly Pariahs. They are, for the most part, of the low and indigent labouring class, and consequently their morals must, in a great measure, be of a questionable standard, and it cannot be helped or remedied, because women of a better or higher class and at all well-to-do, or who are able to earn as much as will keep them above want here, will never consent, and cannot be induced, to emigrate.

C.

From the Acting Mauritius Emigration Agent, to the Protector of Emigrants, Madras, dated Madras, 14th October 1869, No. 160.

I have the honour to forward the enclosed statement, marked A., of the women despatched to the Mauritius from the 1st October 1868 to 30th September 1869.

2. First, with regard to the number of women as compared to that of the men embarked, it will be seen that, in the two first vessels, the proportion was in accordance with that ordered in the Proceedings of Government, No. 1231, dated 30th September 1868.

3. In the third vessel the proportion of women to men was sixty-six of the former to 226 of the latter. The reason of this falling off in the number of women embarked was fully stated in my letter, No. 54, addressed to the Honourable the Chief Secretary to Government, dated 8th June 1869, a copy of which I beg to annex.

4. In the fourth vessel the proportion is in accordance with that which is fixed by Government, but I obtained this result by embarking only 300 statute adults out of 351 which I had in Depôt on the day of embarkation. The Nimrod measured for 326½ statute adults, but had she been capable of taking 350. I would not have been permitted to embark that number because I had not the proper portion of women to put on board. The number of emigrants in the Depôt on the day of embarkation was as follows:—

Men.	Women.	Children.	Total.	Statute Adults.
240	89	44	373	351

In order to have embarked 350 statute adults the number should have been—

Men.	Women.	Children.	Total.	Statute Adults.
234	94	44	372	350

5. It will be perceived that recruiting as I have been, without being influenced by the immoral character of the women, I have not been able to obtain the required proportion.

6. But when the character of the women recruited is taken into consideration, and if it be not desirable to send women of immoral character to the Mauritius, then the proportion of women that could be put on board becomes very small indeed.

7. With the letter to the Honourable the Chief Secretary to Government, I submitted a statement (marked B.) of the number of women treated for primary venereal affections. This statement was for the women embarked on the Agra, Medusa first voyage, and Medusa second voyage. I beg to enclose a similar statement marked C. for the Nimrod.

8. I respectfully submit that these statements carry a conviction with them of the immoral character of the women recruited, and it is needless for me to say anything further of the troubles and evils occasioned in the Depôt and in the Mauritius by these women.

9. In the Statement marked A. it will be seen how few of the women proceeding as emigrants are married women; but many of those who represent themselves as married are really not so; there is no documentary proof on this point.

10. Statement A. also shows the number of women who proceeded alone, that is not under the protection of male relatives. Coupling this fact with the existence of venereal diseases amongst them, it is but fair to presume that they are women of immoral character.

11. Then, with reference to the statement that a large proportion of women is sure to be attended with a large batch of children, I have simply to give the numbers embarked to confirm this assertion.

From the Acting Mauritius Emigration Agent, to the Chief Secretary to Government, Fort Saint George, dated Madras, 8th June 1869, No. 54.

I have the honour to acknowledge receipt of the Proceedings of Madras Government, No. 730, dated 1st June 1869, requesting me to explain why, in the case of the ship Medusa, I deviated from the explicit instructions of the Government of India in regard to the proportion of females to be put on emigrant vessels, and to state in reply that, notwithstanding all my endeavours to obtain the full number of emigrant females for the Medusa, I failed to procure them.

2. In my anxiety to obtain the full number I was not even particular as to the character of the females recruited for as Mr. Blair, the Protector of Emigrants, is aware I admitted confirmed prostitutes into my Depôt, and yet I could not make up the required proportion.

3. In all emigrant ships from Madras nearly one-half the emigrant women are of doubtful character, or about one-third confirmed prostitutes, and since the Contagious Diseases' Act has come into force the supply of emigrant women from this class of the population has diminished, as a good many of these have run away into the interior to avoid the restriction imposed upon them by the Act, and no small number are confined in the Lock Hospitals of Madras.

4. I have kept the Protector of Emigrants informed of these facts, with the view of hereafter applying to Government to diminish the proportion of women to be put on emigrant vessels, and as I have now the opportunity of stating the fact that, in order to make up the required proportion of females from Madras, confirmed prostitutes have to be recruited, and that as it is not at all desirable to send such women as emigrants to Mauritius, I beg you will be pleased to submit this letter to His Excellency the Governor in Council in order that His Excellency may be graciously pleased to move the Government of India to diminish the proportion of female emigrants from forty to twenty-five or thirty to every one hundred males.

5. I have the honour to annex a statement of the number of women treated for primary venereal disease since the re-opening of the Mauritius Emigration Depôt in August last, in order to confirm the assertion made by me as to the character of the women recruited as emigrants.

No 8 Nov,

Note

I submit that this further reduction should not be made. If the recruiters behave fairly & take trouble they can get the desired number of women - low caste women - (not necessarily prostitutes) who will emigrate if treated well.
The recruiters have the extra trouble involved in getting the necessary number.

Even if some prostitutes emigrate, provided they are healthy before being embarked, I cannot see any objection - It is what takes place everywhere. Many prostitutes lead of a life of prostitution emigrate & marry or live in comparatively respectable concubinage - The

I think the (high) limiting ratio is the worst one.

that the facts adduced in these reports as to the class of women recruited,
show imperatively
the necessity of reducing the minimum proportion of females to males, which His Excellency in Council would not fix higher than ~~30~~ 30 to 100 - It cannot be advantageous to exact the present minimum which necessitates that females, not only of questionable character,
but notoriously prostitutes, shall be recruited to make up the required number.
