appended to the Rules, Rules 25 to 28 inclusive and Part VIII, as these contain the alterations and additions above referred to. -

Rule 2. So much of the existing Rule, as refers to the inscription which the badge of a Recruiter of emigrants is to bear, has been omitted from this Rule, as section 20 of the Act contains an express provision on the subject.

similar to the rules laid down by this Government for the guidance of the Consular Agents at the French ports of Pondicherry and Karikal in the event of Bengal coolies being landed at those ports from Reunion. The Government think it desirable that these Rules should be made general, and they have therefore embodied them in the Draft Code with the amendments necessary to make them applicable to return-emigrants from any British Colony, as well to those coming from a French Colony.

Part VIII. of the Rules

Commissioned Officers, appointed to English vessels engaged for the French Emigration Service. The rules, contained in the same Proceedings,

1. According to the Rules of the ^{French} Maritime Service the Captain commands, all authority being vested in him for the working the ship, the general control, the management of the stores and provisions, and the actual responsibility of the voyage.

2. The medical man, if not a Commissioned Officer, is to have no defined rank on board, but is to have the entire entire control and care of the emigrants as far as their health is concerned, being bound to see them well fed, kindly treated, and their quarters kept clean and clear.

3. He is to obey all lawful commands of the Captain, if they in no way interfere with the health or comfort of the emigrants.

4. Prior to the sailing of the ship, he should join the Committee for the special survey. He should satisfy himself that the supplies of all kinds, and drinking water are put on board in the proportions specified in the orders and regulations on the subject. He should assist, with the Captain, at the inspection of the emigrants who are to be embarked embarked, and give his opinion as to the strength of each to bear the fatigues of the voyage.

5. He should confer with the Captain in the preparation of a regulation or official order to provide for the maintenance of a sound state of things during the passage as regards the internal discipline of the batch of coolies. Four copies of this regulation signed by the Captain and the Medical Superintendent, and approved by Governor or French authority at the port of embarkation, should be drawn out, one for the Administration at the port of embarkation, another for the Captain, a third one for

for the Medical Superintendent, and the fourth to be despatched after the departure of the vessel under cover to the address of the Minister of Marine. This regulation must be observed during the voyage, and it is the duty of the Medical Superintendent to see to its obser-vance, by being careful as to all its details being carried out in due course.

Superintendent has the right of direct communication in his diary the occurrences, the cognizance of which

of right.

7. No modification can be made in the regulations adopted for the voyage, without the opinion, in writing, of the Medical Superintendent.

opportunities occur in the course of the voyage, the Medical Agent (or Super-intendent) should transmit a brief report of occurrences to the Minister, and to the authorities at the port of embarkation.

9. On arrival in port, he should furnish a concise account of the voyage to the Governor, and if there is occasion, immediately lodge all complaints he may believe he ought to make with the authorities.

10. In the case of an unusual prolongation
of

of the voyage, if the diminution of the daily rations becomes a question, the Medical Superintendent is to join in any consultations the Captain may hold before coming to a determination. He will have the right to make such observations or representations in the interest of the emigrants, as he may deem proper; but the Captain is not bound to yield to them.

11. As the Medical Officer, the Medical Superintendent must attend to everything connected with the general hygiene, the preservation of the health of the passengers, the care of the sick, their nursing nursing, the keeping and control of the hospital; he will obtain from the Captain everything ^{considered} necessary in respect of these. To aid him he will have an Indian interpreter who will assist him in all the details of the service, and have the control over the sick attendants chosen from among the passengers.

12. In case of a protracted voyage, if it appears necessary to the Medical Superintendent, with reference to the state of health on board or to the deterioration or insufficiency of provisions, to put in at any port, he will make a proposal to that effect in writing, and the

Captain

Captain will give his answer in the same form, whether it be in the affirmative or negative.

13. The Medical Superintendent has to keep a diary in which he records occurrences, and incidents relating to his mission. This diary will furnish the materials for the reports to be made to the different authorities. The report to the Minister should be accompanied by extracts or letters in support, having reference to any difficulties that may

may have happened during the voyage.

14. In conclusion the Medical Superintendent will be careful to maintain a position of respectful subordination to the Captain, insisting with firmness where the health of the emigrants is undoubtedly concerned, but restricting his interference rigidly to such cases.
