it. ^(C) Full information regarding the character of the surface in this Presidency will be found on page VIII of the statistical portion of the general Administration report for 1887-88.

Ch. II. Geology. The last four Volumes convey a very inadequate idea of the geology of the Presidency, which will be found fully described in Vol. II, App. III of the Manual of the Administration of the Madras Presidency.

Ch. III. Rainfall & Climate.

Nothing is said about sanitaria (e.g. the Nilgiris, the Sherafoys and the Palni Hills) or about Artesian wells, or about the cyclones which occur regularly on the Madras Coast.

Ch. VIII. Area & Population.

(A language is not at present the language of the hereditary people. A tabular tabular statement may be added to this ^{chapter} showing District by District for each Province the area and population, as compared with those of the several Counties and shires in the United Kingdom.

Ch. XI. Finance.

A table might be added to show the incidence of taxation in each Province: e.g. ^{upper} from general revenues, municipal tolls, local cesses etc.

Ch. XII. Education.

The statistics under each subdivision for the several provinces ^{might} be given in a tabular statement showing, for example, the results of the University examinations for a series of years, in proportion to the ~~area~~ the population, and the amount of expenditure incurred by Government in each Province. A map may also be added showing

It is observed that the scope of the Atlas is too general to admit of any definite suggestions being offered for improving it. Very little information is furnished regarding the Madras Presidency as a whole; The following observations may however be made:—

Ch. I. Physical Configuration

- (a) The lengths of the principal rivers and the heights of the chief mountain peaks may be indicated in the map as compared with those of the British Isles.
- (b) The chief rivers of the South should be called the Canary not the Coleroon which is only a branch.

The form of India ask for suggestion for improvement - but the scope of the work is so general &
 some chapters deal so superficially with the subject matter taken up, that it may not be worth while to suggest suggestions -
 As may have been expected
 the Northern Provinces occupy the lion's share of the attention. Gov-
 t. is each subject, Madras having generally left in the cold - e.g. Kelapp in Ch. I. the large river of the South is called the Coleroon; & in Ch. II, are all that is mentioned of Madras;
 the last lines in Ch. III. being the spirit in which the whole is written; & the word is said about Samtania in two chapters, because Madras has the bulk of it?
 Ch. IV. What about artesian wells?
 Ch. V. Madras is omitted.
 Ch. VIII. could be much improved.
 Ch. IX. is very full, why cannot such minute details be given in this chapter?
 Ch. XII. University statistics: Madras hardly mentioned at all, under any branch!

Simla, the 8th June 1888.

SIR,

WITH reference to your letter No. 378, dated the 31st ultimo, I am directed to advise the despatch to your address of 30 copies of the Statistical Atlas of India, and to state that as applications have been received for a large number of copies of the Atlas, the Government of India is unable to meet your demand in full.

2. I am at the same time desired to request that, with the permission of

His Excellency the Governor in Council, each officer to whom the Atlas is distributed may be invited to make any suggestions that may occur to him regarding improvements in the form and matter of the present compilation. It is contemplated to issue a new edition of the Atlas, and any suggestions which may appear to the Government of Madras to be useful should be forwarded to the Government of India by the 1st of October next.

I have the honour to be,

SIR,

Your most obedient Servant,

W. R. LAWRENCE,
